INDIA METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT

New Delhi, the 10th January 1955

Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in Northwest India in January, February and March 1955

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of winter precipitation in Northwest India during January to March from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are, in the order of decreasing reliability, the following:—

- (1) The Westerly component of the upper winds over northern India at a height of 3 to 5 miles (September second half and October first half),
- (2) December rain at Port Blair,
- (3) Mean pressure in December in South America,
- (4) December rain in western region.

2. DIVISION 'NORTHWEST INDIA'

In this memorandum 'Northwest India' is taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) (including PEPSU and Delhi), Rajasthan, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Cutch. In as much, however, as the rainfall in March in the Uttar Pradesh is said to be prejudicial rather than favourable to the crops, this rainfall is not taken into consideration.

3. DATA

The relevant data for the present season are:—

- (1) The high level winds over northern India—The westerly component of the upper winds was slightly stronger than usual over New Delhi and Gwalior.
- (2) December rainfall at Port Blair was in large defect.
- (3) South American pressure—Pressure was 0.7 mm. below normal in December.
- (4) The western rain was in very large defect in December.

4. CONCLUSION

Out of the four factors which are used in forecasting the winter precipitation in Northwest India, this year, Port Blair rain is favourable, high level winds over Northern India are indifferent, and South American pressure and Western rain are very unfavourable. The statistical indications are that the combined rainfall and snowfall in Northwest India during the period January to March 1955 is likely to be normal or slightly below normal.
